Two sections of the dam cap at Lake Charleston have broken away and a sinkhole is growing upstream behind the dam. City officials estimated

Sunday that the hole had opened up 97 feet behind the dam. No permanent repair plans have been established yet.

Israel issues apology over spy case

JERUSALEM (AP)—Israel made a belated and conditional apology to the United States on Sunday over the Jonathan J. Pollard spy case. It promised to punish culprits and disband a secret intelligence unit in an investigation finds that the U.S. Navy analyst was recruited to spy for Israel.

The apology was issued in the name of Prime Minister Shimon Peres and delivered to U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering in hopes of defusing the controversy, officials said.

The announcement fell short of a full admission of guilt, but said that any Israeli espionage directed against the United States "was wrong, and the government of Israel apologizes for it."

It was Israel's first apology since the Federal Bureau of Investigation arrested Pollard on Nov. 21 and accused the 31-year-old American Jew of selling military secrets to Israel for $50,000 over the last 18 months.

His wife, Annz Henderson-Pollard, 25, was arrested the next day and charged with unauthorized possession of national defense documents.

Secretary of State George Shultz said the United States was satisfied with the statement, according to the Department spokesman Pete Martinez.

"We think this is an excellent statement, and we are satisfied with it and we welcome it," Martinez said. Shultz told reporters on his way to Cartagena, Colombia, for a meeting of the Organization of American States.

"We have full confidence in Israel's determination and ability to pursue this case down to the last detail and to bring those responsible to account," Shultz said.

The apology, released after a Cabinet meeting, pledged to punish those responsible and "completely and permanently dismantle" the unit involved if the charges against Pollard proved true.

The statement did not identify the unit. But Israeli officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said Pollard was working for a secret department of the Defense Ministry founded 20 years ago to conduct industrial espionage, but which recently expanded to include military spying.

Accounts published by U.S. newspapers and confirmed by officials named Rafael Eytan as head of the unit, which used scientific attaches in the United States as conduits for other types of espionage.

Eytan, an advisor on terrorism to former Prime Ministers Menachem Begin and Yitzhak Shamir, continued to head the unit although he left the prime minister's office after Peres took office in September 1984.

The statement read to reporters in English and Hebrew by Cabinet Secretary Yossi Beilin said Israel's inquiry was still incomplete, but it pledged to pursue the investigation "no matter where the trail may lead."

The statement did not relate to U.S. demands that Israel return documents it allegedly bought from Pollard and allow questioning of two Israeli diplomats who were recalled from the United States last week. But Israel Television said the government would probably accede to both these requests.

Israeli commentators indicated the survival of Peres's fractious 15-month-old coalition government could be at stake if Israel gave the Americans further information about its dealings with Pollard.

"A disclosure of the person responsible for the affair in Israel could open a Pandora's box of recriminations at the political level, not to mention what the results could be if this debate went public," wrote military correspondent Ron Ben-Ishai in the Yedioth Ahronot daily Sunday.

Growing sinkhole viewed as threat to water supply

By DAVE McKINNEY
Editor in chief

Despite a continuing vigil over Charleston's broken spillway, city officials' attention turned toward a growing sinkhole that could eventually threaten the city's water supply.

Since last Wednesday, when Gov. James R. Thompson viewed the site, the sinkhole has trudged about 60 feet upstream, and two sections of the spillway's cap have given way, said Assistant City Engineer Dan England.

Rock and sand were placed last week between the dropping Embarras River and an earthen dam that contains Charleston's water supply.

The shoring up came after Thompson declared the county a disaster area and made $20,000 in state money available.

"The dike's our main priority now as opposed to protecting the spillway," England said, echoing the recommendation of a state team of inspectors who last week surveyed the flood-ravaged site.

Charleston's water supply, though not immediately threatened, is pumped from the Embarras and is stored in a reservoir separate from the river.

If the sinkhole, which is about 230 feet wide and 97 feet upstream, continues its route, river-water could erode away ground that supports the dike and perhaps eventually lead to a collapse, England said.

"We'd be supporting 10 feet of water 20 feet in the air, and I don't think the dike can handle that kind of pressure," he said.

City officials are checking the sinkhole's progress twice daily.

The channel-cutting process has been aided by the path river water is taking through the broken spillway, which according to England, is about 50 percent destroyed.

However, river conditions, impending bad weather and a lack of immediate funding all prevent a quick repair of the spillway, Charleston Mayor Murray Choate said.

The city will hire a private engineering firm as soon as the river recedes to assess damage to the spillway, Choate said. He refused to speculate on whether a new spillway would be built.

"I'm not trying to be hidden with my remarks, but I don't want to say what we'll do yet," Choate said. "I think we'll have to review everything and see what the costs will be."

England estimated the city's cheapest route would be to patch the spillway's current hole. But with a half-new spillway and a half-old one, the whole structure would be out of date, he said.

"My personal opinion," England said, "is that it would be in the city's best interest to build a new structure."

Unprecedented rainfall in November is the primary factor officials point to in explaining the collapse of the 38-year-old spillway.

Water rushing over the top of the dam had moved several cement supports used to support the spillway. A flat "apron" behind the dam apparently slid early last week, leaving the spillway in tact, but allowing water to flow beneath the structure.

Water, which crashed against the loosened upright slabs, caused erosion of the higher row of supports directly against the dam's cap.

Although some evacuations have transpired since concern about the dam breaking surfaced, no reports of water damage or personal injury have been reported.

Sakharov's wife leaves for Italy

MOSCOW (AP)—Yelena Bonner, wife of dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov, is booked to leave Moscow Monday for medical treatment in Italy and the United States after a 19-month exile during which sources say she spent months isolated from her husband and friends.

Mrs. Bonner has promised Soviet authorities she will not meet the news media during her three-month stay in the West.

Uniformed guards have kept watch on her Moscow apartment since she returned to the Soviet capital Tuesday and refuse to let foreigners inside.

Sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the 62-year-old physician looked very tired and in poor health after she returned from internal exile in Gorky, 250 miles to the east.

Mrs. Bonner, who suffers from heart and eye ailments, had not been in Moscow since the spring of 1984, when she was held in Gorky on charges of anti-Soviet slander. She later was convicted and sentenced to five years' exile in the city, where her husband was banished in January 1980.

Sakharov, 64, once one of the nation's most prominent and decorated scientists, has staged at least three hunger strikes, most recently last summer, to win permission for his wife to get medical treatment abroad.

Major storm blasts Midwest

By the Associated Press

A major storm that dumped up to 2 feet of snow in the Rockies piled up snow and iced roads Sunday from the southern Plains to the Great Lakes at the close of the Thanksgiving holiday weekend, and police warned people across parts of the upper Midwest to stay off the roads.

Blizzard warnings were issued for central Iowa and south-central and southeastern Minnesota, with subzero temperatures, up to a foot of snow and winds of 40 mph.

Students at some universities and colleges in Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota were told to stay home Monday, and hundreds of church services were canceled in parts of Minnesota and in Des Moines.

Drifts piled up more than 3 feet high in southeastern Minnesota, the National Weather Service reported.

"It's a bona fide blizzard," said National Weather Service meteorologist Gary Forster in Des Moines. "It's really dangerous. People don't realize how the cold affects you."

Low temperature records were broken from the northern Rockies into Texas, with wind chill factors down to 60 below zero, and thunderstorms broke out along the storm's southern edge. Only one regular reporting station in Montana was above zero by 8 a.m.—Missoula with 1 above—and at 2 p.m. ZST Havre was still at 17 below zero.

The weather service warned of poor travel conditions from Oklahoma to Michigan, saying wind gusting to 40 mph could block more roads with drifts.

Snow fell from the central Rockies to the western Great Lakes and from Oklahoma to the Canadian border, with slush and freezing rain into northwestern Illinois. Along the storm's southern edge, thunderstorms crossed the lower Mississippi Valley, downing trees and power lines in Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

A tornado ripped across Alabama, knocking down trees and damaging houses and barns and injuring three people in Blount and Etowah counties, police reported. Wind up to 70 mph caused damage elsewhere in the state.

Blowing snow reduced visibility, down to zero in some places in the Midwest, and secondary roads were blocked by drifts in parts of Iowa, the Dakotas and Minnesota.

"The best place to be is in your home," Minnesota State Patrol Dispatcher Tracy Wollman said at Mankato.

Spring tuition due next week

by AMY ZURAWSKI
campus editor

Spring semester preregistration will be completed next week with payments for tuition and fees in the Union Old Ballroom.

Assistant Registration Director Dave Sardella said schedule completion for spring semester will be conducted Dec. 9-12, and students will be expected to pay their tuition in full or the classes they preregistered for will be canceled.

Registration Director Mike Taylor said students unable to pay their tuition during registration completion should go to the financial aid table during schedule completion to request a deferment. However, he said deferments will only be given to students who have proof that they are waiting to receive some type of grant or loan.

Taylor said many students wait until it's too late to tell their parents about the payment and find trouble getting the money they need.

Tuition for a full-time, lower-division student who is an Illinois resident is $706.95. Upper-division, full-time students who reside in Illinois must pay $730.95 and full-time graduate students living in Illinois must pay $772.95.

Out-of-state, full-time, lower-division students must pay $1,726.95. Upper-division, out-of-state, full-time students must pay $1,798.95 and out-of-state, full-time graduate students must pay $1924.95.

Students who have a scholarship that requires they only pay fees will be required to remit $196.95.

Although Taylor said a "typical" schedule completion crowd is expected, he noted that the process has been spread out over four days in attempt to alleviate any large crowds.

Students, who must bring their ID to be admitted to the Union Ballroom, can attend schedule completion according to the last number of their social security number by the following schedule.

Hosting camps may give Eastern a recruitment tool

The number of summer camps at Eastern is increasing and so could the university's potential for enrollment.

The American Legion Auxiliary Illini Girls State conference session will join in a parade of summer camps and conferences Eastern hosts each year. The Girls State conference will operate one week before the American Legion premier Boy's State program convenes here.

Girls State has been held on the MacMurray College campus in Jacksonville for more than 40 years. The move to Eastern's campus is expected to provide more room, according to Helen Malenoski, Girls State director.

Students who attend Boys State and Girls State are generally very involved in high school activities and chosen to attend the week long program, which focuses on local, state and national politics, because of their scholastic ability.

Boys State draws as many as 1,000 high school juniors from all over the state and this summer's Girls State program is expected to draw more than 570.

Summer programs such as these bring prospective students in for a close up view of college life in Charleston. And with some education officials predicting that the pool of college-bound students will get smaller in the next few years, these summer camps could give Eastern a recruiting edge.

Letters should not exceed 250 words.

Your turn

Knowledge is easier with observation

Editor:

I write in response to John E. P. Mullally's letter to the editor which was published in the Nov. 18 edition of The Daily Eastern News (Discussion cloudy—femininity si, feminism no!).

With the information provided by a reading of a newspaper report, Mr. Mullally was able to write and submit a letter which made mention of his perception of two distinctions.

The letter suggests that it is "nominalistic" to distinguish between brutalization/murder and lovemaking. At my home we make this distinction.

Mr. Mullally makes a distinction between femininity and feminism. If he had the time and the inclination to attend faculty and community film/lecture/discussions such as the "Not a Love Story" presentation of Oct. 29, and the Women's Studies discussion of Nov. 6, he might make some discoveries.

He might discover, for example, that femininity and feminism are not contradictory. He might discover that the two terms, and their personifications, are, in fact, complementary.

Carmin's behavior example of 'pride'

Editor:

I found nothing amusing about the cartoon by Becky Michael that appeared in the Nov. 22 edition of The Daily Eastern News illustrating John Carmin's plight.

I personally don't know Mr.

Carmin. As a matter of fact, the only thing we have in common is our choice in schools.

All I know is what I read and how I feel. I think Carmin's behavior, although not acceptable, can teach us something. Here is a student, correction, ex-student, who still has enough determination to work for the betterment of the student body. I call this pride.

After reading the article in the Nov. 21 edition of the News, seems to me Mr. Larry Markey was just covering up for himself. Let's go Student Senate/body. Make this work for you, not against. Use John's good points grab onto his pride and keep going.

The newspaper's job is to inform and raise school spirit/pride, not to degrade students for having it.

Perry, 'Gipper' have a lot in common

America loves William "The Refrigerator" Perry.

The Refrigerator is the Chicago Bears' new all-purpose player. And at 308 pounds, he can pretty much play whatever he wants, on or off the field.

Perry's recent rise to popularity has given him the makings of an American football folk hero. And in that sense, he has a lot in common with another American folk hero, Ronald Wilson Reagan.

Hold back your disbelief. They really do have a lot in common, although some of the similarities are more apparent than others.

For starters, both began with a great deal of popularity. Perry was the Bears' No. 1 draft choice. Reagan was a popular actor whose starring role was a dying football player, "The Gipper," in the film "Knut Rockne: All American." He was also the No. 1 choice of the American people in 1980, but especially in 1984 when he won the election in 49 of 50 states. There's just something about all-around strong men that America likes.

They're both versatile. Perry has, in his brief stint with the Bears, played tailback, defensive tackle, offensive guard, fullback and—believe it or not—wide receiver. Reagan, in addition to being the nation's chief executive and popular public figure, is a former actor (some might argue about the "former"), horseback rider, woodsman and the father of a ballet dancer.

The similarities continue. Perry achieved part of his rise to fame by twice bowling over the Green Bay Packers' linebacker George Cumby in a dash with the ball for the end zone. Reagan has bowled over many a formidable opponent, including PLO terrorists, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and, of course, Walter Mondale.

Enough is enough, you say. But the similarities go on. Perry is tough and none too nimble for a bulky 308 pounds. He can crash through a line or fend off tacklers. But he has, as any football player does, one essential weakness: his feet. Any opponent can quickly bring the hulking Refrigerator to the grid by tackling him by the very thing that keeps him going. Once he's off his feet, he's not much more than a beached whale.

Reagan has a similar problem. His popularity and momentum have been fueled by a bulky persona attributable to his past experience as an actor, and by millions upon millions of dollars of support from conservative special interest groups. Take away that and what have you got? A stammering old reactionary who can't get his facts straight.

Crossview:

Daily Egyptian

To continue the comparison, for all the media-hyped plays that the Fridge succeeds in, there are many more plays where he is foiled. Reagan has succeeded in a few of his favorite plays, namely having taxes and social programs cut while increasing defense spending, but there are even more setbacks.

Tax reform, for instance, is one play where Reagan has been sacked. Congress has more or less transformed the issue into its own, yet the President continues stump-jumping across America to promote his ideas about how to overhaul the system. When it is said and done, the new tax system—if there ever is one—will be just as complicated as the old one and the American people will be set back a few yards.

Neither Reagan nor the Refrigerator will be popular forever. As the Bears' defensive tackle Dan Hampton said, "William is more or less an oddity right now." There are others in the lineup, namely Walter Payton, who are better players than the Fridge. Reagan has enjoyed the power of popularity for some time now. But as his second administration winds down from the 1984 victory, and as compromise after compromise is made on his favorite issues—such as giving in on sanctions on South Africa—Reagan will begin to lose his inflated popularity.

The true test will be with time. And if the upcoming off-year elections roll in Democrat after Democrat, Reagan will have lost. If not, Republicans will have won one for the Gipper.

When the date becomes a crime

Experts try to define the line between 'seduction' and date rape

By TOM PARISI
Staff writer

To many people, the word "rape" may conjure up images of a knife-wielding stranger violently attacking a complete stranger in a dark alley.

While this image is not always incorrect, it is not typical of most rapes, especially among college students.

According to Bonnie Buckley, coordinator for Coles County Women Against Rape, most studies show that 10 percent of rape victims know their offenders. Approximately 47 percent of these rapes occur in date rape situations.

According to Genie Lenihan, a psychologist at Eastern's counseling center, "Acquaintance and date rape is far more common than any other type of rape."

Classifying the crime

Buckley said there are two basic classifications for date rape. "One is an offender who is using the date situation to get at (a victim)," she said.

The second type, which seems to be more common, involves males who "might have mistaken beliefs about females," Buckley said. "Often the offender thinks he is seducing the woman."

Of course, either type poses problems in a college campus setting. "Certainly there is a level of date rape on all college campuses, and Eastern is no exception," Lenihan said.

On the average, Lenihan said Eastern women report about six date rapes a year to the counseling center, "and that is only the tip of the iceberg."

In the last six months, however, only two students have come into the center for date-rape counseling.

In one of the reported cases, the woman had gone to a physician before coming to the counseling center. "The doctor, in a sense, said, 'Well that's too bad, you must have done something in order to ask for that,'" Lenihan said, adding that "no referrals to counseling were given" to the victim who was "near suicidal."

Society's role

Whether or not this skeptical reaction is typical of most medical and law enforcement officials is a matter of debate.

However, the experts agree that the society in general has a lot to learn about the date-rape issue.

Humiliation, lack of proof keep victims out of court

By TOM PARISI
Staff writer

Date rape is a serious social problem which greatly lacks public attention and sympathy largely because the crime goes unreported.

This low incidence of reporting offenders seems to stem mainly from the inability of the legal system to successfully prosecute this type of rapist.

Charleston police detective Earl Ashmore believes convicting offenders is a way of "bringing the problem into the public minds," but admits, "It's hard to get a case through court."

Bringing a case to trial requires the victim to relive the traumatic experience over and over again on the witness stand. "We must get to the nitty gritty and know exactly what is done," Ashmore added.

"Normally it depends on the individual; it's very seldom the victim wants to go all the way to court," Ashmore said. "In a way, it's a shame."

Along with the inappropriate embarrassment the victim suffers, Ashmore also cited "peer pressure from friends of the suspect" as another reason victims seldom press charges.

And victims who do decide to go through with the charges often lack needed evidence required for the case to stand up in court.

According to Nancy Owen, Coles County state's attorney, "Over the past five years we've had only two cases of this, but there was insufficient evidence."

Ashmore explained that "the first thing victims want to do (after the rape) is destroy our evidence, such as clothing," which victims often wash or throw away.

The first thing a victim should do is "immediately report the incident to the police, and we'll take care of the rest," Ashmore said.

Lenihan said she believes public agencies are sometimes "insensitive" to the problem. She added, however, that the local police have been very cooperative in the past.

Buckley, on the other hand, has been generally pleased with the treatment victims have received from the medical and law enforcement professions.

Lenihan said there is a "social attitude that, some way, the victim could have gotten out of it," adding that the "paralysis" of the situation must be appreciated.

Buckley agrees that "society is less likely to believe the victim if she knows the offender well."

This is part of the paradox of date rape: The better the victim knows the offender, the more devastating the incidence, yet the less willing society is to believe the victim.

With date rapes, Lenihan said, "the degree of inappropriate self-blame and guilt is almost always much more" than in regular rape incidents.

The campus angle

The likelihood of an Eastern female experiencing this type of trauma is not as rare as most people would believe. Statistics tell a startling story about the date rape situation on the college level.

• A 1977 study by E. J. Kanin and S. R. Parcell of nearly 300 college women noted 50.7 percent of the women interviewed reported "offensive and displeasing aggression" by male acquaintances.

• In a survey of nearly 350 college men, 25 percent reported they had made forceful attempts at coitus, and that these attempts had created obvious distress to the women involved.

• In 1977, a study by N.J. Barnett and H. S. Field found that 33 percent of the male undergraduate college students sampled endorsed the belief that it would do some women good to be raped.

• In a survey of 408 female undergraduates taking psychology courses in 1984 at the University of South Dakota, slightly more than 20 percent said they had been physically forced by a man to have sexual relations on a date.

• A study of 350 college males at the University of California-Los Angeles and the University of Manitoba-

Winnipeg found 35 percent of the men reporting some likelihood of committing rape if they knew they would not be caught.

Reasons for these shocking numbers seem to stem from misunderstandings and myths about the nature rape, and a basic lack of communication between men and women.

"If a female agrees to go to a private place, often times males view that as an invitation to a sexual relationship, whereas the woman sees it as something different," Buckley said.

'An act of force'

While a lack of communication may shed some light on the reasons date rape occurs, it does not explain the violence and force involved in the act.

"It is an act of force, and has a level of violence in it," Lenihan explained. The violence often reaches "the level of tearing off clothes, but it may not be life-threatening; that would be rare."

Buckley said although the rapist "might not be a violent person, she (the victim) might sense he is violent. Prevention might depend on whether or not she can read the cues and how violent the male is."

Recognition and prevention

Ideally, it is better for prevention of date rape to take place before the woman is alone with her date, especially if she has recognized the warning signals.

Typically, Buckley said, the date rapist will hold traditional sex stereotypes, not listen to his date's conversation (indicating he doesn't care about her) and make comments about, look at or touch a woman's body in a way that makes her feel uncomfortable.

Ashmore, however, doesn't believe there is a typical profile of a date rapist. "It could be almost anybody, especially if they're drunk," he said, adding that reported incidents often result after "fraternity or other house parties."

The best advice Ashmore could offer may seem a little old-fashioned: "Especially if you're going to a party of any kind, stay with friends and make a date for the following day. That's idealistic I know."

THE ELIMINATOR.

The AT&T Card eliminates fumbling with coins and hassling over bills.

The AT&T Card. The fast, easy way to call long distance— from anywhere to anywhere, anytime. The AT&T Card makes keeping in touch with friends and family a lot more convenient when you're at school.

You'll be able to get through on almost any public phone—on campus or off—without bothering with coins. And you'll actually pay up to 50¢ less than for AT&T collect, third-party or coin state-to-state calls. In fact, for most calls, it's the lowest rate next to direct dialing. And there's no charge to order the Card; no minimum usage fee.

You can also use your card to make calls from other people's rooms: the charge will show up on your bill, not theirs. No need to call collect or charge it to a third party.

You'll also eliminate a lot of hassle if you share a phone with roommates. With the AT&T Card, you'll get your own separate monthly bill itemizing only your calls. You'll pay more per call than if you dialed direct—but you'll save a lot of headaches trying to figure out who owes what.

As you can see, the AT&T Card eliminates all kinds of hassles. And you can get one whether or not you have a phone in your own name. Put The Eliminator to work for you. Sign up for your AT&T Card by completing and mailing the attached application. For more information call toll free 1 800 CALL ATT, Ext. 4589.

Aldridge explodes for 32; lady cagers third

MADISON, Wisc.—Senior forward Chris Aldridge scored a tournament-high 32 points to lead Eastern's women's basketball team to a 70-64 victory over the University of Wisconsin and a third-place finish in the Badger Invitational over the weekend.

The two-day tournament began Friday, with coach Bobbie Hilke's quintet dropping a 73-56 decision to St. John's University. In the other first-round game, the host Badgers fell to Miami of Ohio, 68-60.

Miami, a team Eastern beat 72-64 last week, won Saturday night's title game by derailing the Express, 52-31.

But Saturday night's spotlight belonged to Aldridge and the Panthers, who moved their record to 13-1.

While the Badgers hit at a brisk .475 clip from the floor, 29 of 61, the Lady Panthers would not be deterred at the free throw line, making 22 of 33 attempts.

Wisconsin, meanwhile, could count only six of 24 free throw attempts.

From the floor, Eastern shot a respectable .400, making 24 of 60 shots.

"We went back to the basics tonight," Eastern coach Barbara Hilke stressed in her address to members of the press following the game.

"We played up to our abilities tonight," she added. "After Friday's loss to St. John's, we went back to the fundamentals of shooting and playing good defense."

Wisconsin led by as many as eight points in the first half, but a bucket by Aldridge and two free throws by the 5-10 Taylorville product put the Panthers ahead, 28-26, with 3:52 left before intermission.

The Panthers maintained a narrow lead for the remainder of the action, and took a 31-28 advantage to the lockerroom with them.

Wisconsin closed the gap to two points, 50-48, before Hilke called for a timeout to change the Panthers' strategy.

In the next three minutes, the Eastern outscored the Badgers 12-4 for a 62-52 lead with only 4:07 left in the contest.

Wisconsin closed the gap to 68-64 with just 23 seconds left but couldn't pull the proverbial rabbit out of the hat.

While teammate Aldridge scored a tournament-high of 32 points, Melanie Hatfield set two records for the most steals; nine against St. John's Friday night which broke a 1979 record held by Iowa State, and then broke her own record with 11 thefts against Wisconsin Saturday night.

Bears not superstitious in quest for 13th straight

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP)—Some of the Chicago Bears have never heard of triskaidekaphobia, few can pronounce it and most don't care, claiming they have no fear of No. 13.

Triskaidekaphobia is the fear of No. 13. And No. 13 is looming prominently this week for the undefeated darlings of the National Football League.

"No, I'm not superstitious," said Walter Payton. "No. 13 to me only means the 13th win. How many games have we gone without giving up a touchdown?"

Thirteen was the answer.

"Aha," said Payton. "No. 13's not so bad, is it?"

The Bears will be seeking their 13th victory at Miami Monday night.

Mention No. 13 to defensive end Dan Hampton and his mind and thoughts are of Miami quarterback

Dan Marino, who wears No. 13. Hampton wasn't even aware the question dealt with the Bears seeking their 13th straight victory.

"He's still got to have the arm and time to throw the football," said Hampton of Marino.

Steve Fuller, who figures to start at quarterback again in place of injured Jim McMahon, said, "Athletes are notoriously superstitious."

"I'm very superstitious," said Fuller. "I have my pre-game rituals. I do the same thing every week. I skip the pre-game meal and when I get to the clubhouse I sneak back with the equipment guys and have one of their doughnuts."

"I try to do the same things the same way every week," said Fuller. "But I never thought about No. 13 until you mentioned it."

If Dolphins don't untrack the Bears, will anybody do it?

If you would have asked any Chicago sports fan in past years what was the best thing to come out of the windy city, the response was usually I-57 and deep dish pizza.

It used to be there was a prerequisite for living in Chicago—to do so, you agreed to support losing sports franchises or else swim naked in the Chicago River if not loyal.

And when it came to football, the price was even steeper. Normally when winter rolled around, Soldier Field was a good place only for brandy and whiskey-drinking contests among lakeshore rowdies. They would watch Walter Payton dance in the cold and his team, the Bears, begin their annual hibernation at Walter's high-stepping feet.

Payton is still high-stepping as good as ever. And now he has a cause—his team is 12-0 and just seven wins away from achieving football mortality.

Monday night the Bears chase the spooky 13th win against the Miami Dolphins in the Orange Bowl, and the mystique surrounding the game is thicker than William 'Refrigerator' Perry's mid-section.

The Dolphins, without debate, have been one of the most successful teams in the NFL over the past decade and a half. Miami was also the last team to taste perfection.

When connoisseurs of the NFL reminisce, 1972 is marked as a vintage year. That's the season Miami went 17-0, winning three playoff games including Super Bowl VII.

The Bears have already clinched the home field advantage for the playoffs, barring catastrophe. Now is time for the Monsters of the Midway to groom their growl and concentrate on the finer points of winning.

If you believe in omens, this could be the game that determines whether or not the Bears go undefeated. If the team that last did it can't stop them, who will?

But then again, if you're superstitious, streaky or trendy, you'd best bet on the Dolphins. The Bears have never beat the Dolphins in three games. This year, Miami is 5-0 at home.

For what it matters, Miami has won six straight Monday night games at home with Frank Gifford at the mike. The Bears are 0-8 on Monday road games.

But that was then and this is now. As Bear coach, Mike Ditka says when asked if his name will be alongside Don Shula's for a perfect season, he'll tell you nobody can beat his team but the Bears themselves.

Monday's national spectacle will yield several other delectables. What will ABC commentator O.J. Simpson say (or mumble) about Payton as he attempts to top O.J.'s old record with his eighth straight 100-yard rushing game against a defense ranked 23rd in the league against the rush?

Dolphin quarterback Dan Marino, the all-American boy quarterback who promised he'd be the one buying Diet Pepsi's this year, will be reduced to trying to buy time to pass Monday night, which he has done quite well so far.

Marino has been sacked only 12 times in as many games, while the Bears have sacked the opposition 50 times already. Something will have to give, and the Bears believe it will be the Dolphin's offensive line.

Chicago's defense has been so awesome that sportswriters have forgotten what positions holdouts Todd Bell and Al Harris played.

Still, doesn't it seem odd to hear people saying the Dolphins may have a chance against the Bears Monday?

Ditka is staring the Bears straight in the snout. Who says Bears sleep in the winter, anyway?

Eastern All-American forward Jon Collins figures to play a prominent role Monday night when the Panthers head for Big Ten country to clash with the Golden Gophers of Minnesota. Collins leads the team with a 22.5 scoring average.

Monday night's Eastern-Minnesota basketball game may well develop into a head-to-head battle of 7-footers.

For the Panthers that means senior center Kevin Duckworth, and for the Golden Gophers it's senior John Shasky in the pivot.

"(We plan to) turn Kevin Duckworth loose," Eastern coach Rick Samuels said of his gameplan. "Kevin doesn't get a chance to play physical basketball very often."

Duckworth carries a 21.0 points-per-game average into the contest for the 2-0 Panthers. Duckworth, last week's Association of Mid-Continent Universities' Player-of-the-Week, is also averaging 13.0 rebounds a game.

Shasky, listed among the "Top 25 Unheralded Players" in the nation by The Sporting News, is averaging 22.0 points a game.

Samuels is keeping his fingers crossed that Duckworth gets off to a strong start.

"In the past we've gotten different responses out of Kevin (when going against other physical centers)," Samuels said.

"The key will be if he gets off to an early start. I hope they (referees) let him play."

Duckworth went against physical centers Russell

Cross of Purdue and Steve Stipanovich of Missouri in his freshman year. Both Cross and Stipanovich later went on to play in the NBA.

Samuels also indicated that the Panthers may run the ball on Minnesota, although it won't be Eastern's primary gameplan.

"We're going to use a number of players," Samuels said. "Because of the physical nature of the game, (freshman power forward) Mike West (freshman forward) Dave Vance and also (junior forward) Ronnie Duckworth will see a lot of action."

As for the opportunity to play a member of the Big Ten Conference, Samuels was excited about the added competition to Eastern's non-conference schedule.

"Minnesota has a great basketball reputation," Samuels said. "They play in the premier league in our region of the country. Thus far, there's no question this is our biggest game."

Minnesota possesses a potent guard combination in senior Marc Wilson and sophomore Todd Alexander. Golden Gopher coach Jim Dutcher is also counting on forwards Kevin Smith, Lee Mitchell and George Williams to take some of the heat off Shasky.

Eastern will counter with senior forward Jon Collins and senior guard Doug Crook. Collins is averaging 22.5 points a game, while Crook chips in a 14.0 average.

Dan Marino wears No. 13. The Bears haven't yielded a touchdown in 13 quarters. Monday, they'll go for their 13th straight win and superstition is running low.
